

Pragma named one of New York City's best places to work for third consecutive year

26 September 2019 – New York: Pragma, a multi-asset quantitative trading technology provider, has been named by Crain's Business as one of New York City's Best Places to Work for the third consecutive year.

Crain's conducted a confidential survey of more than 20,000 New York City employees, gathering information on working conditions, benefits and corporate culture. The final list of 100 companies "share a commitment to creating a supportive, collegial and empowering workplace".

Pragma serves customers in North America and Europe, providing trading technology tools for equity, foreign exchange and futures products. Established in 2003, it continues to be led by Co-Founder and CEO David Mechner and employs approximately 50 people.

David Mechner, Co-Founder and CEO, comments: "It is a great privilege to be named one of New York City's Best Places to Work once again. With an open culture based on collaboration and teamwork, we are proud that Pragma remains a place where the work is diverse and rewarding. With so many other great and reputable companies, it truly is a testament to our people – who are at the core of our success – and the inclusive work environment we have created."
